To the Editor of the Bombay Gazette.

DEAR SIR,

In addition to the Extract of a letter which was sent you relative to the case of a Medical Gentleman who was recently attacked with the prevailing epidemical discase, and which appeared in your paper of the 20th ult. I have pleasure in furnishing you with more detailed information, which may be useful, and afford some interest to the Community, particularly to those, who have witnessed the dreadful effects of this awful Malady.

Yours,
M.

3rd October 1820.

Camp Dapoolee, 18th Sept. 1820.

DEAR SIR,

It is with much pleasure I am now enabled to acknowledge the receipt of your kind and no less useful letter of the 2d ultimo, accompanied by two letters on the terrible, and very interesting disease, the prevailing Epidemic for which I beg you will accept my warmest thanks; I believe Mr. Sheppee has already informed you that I have had a severe attack of that furious disease which very nigh terminated my existence and which has been the cause of my long silence; after so much has been said upon it by so many very able and experienced practitioners, any observations that I could offer, would avail but little I fear; however as I attribute my life to a remedy which Mr. Powell strongly recommended in one of his letters to Dr. Meek the value of which I think cannot be too generally known; I hope you will not think it presumption in me to give you a statement of my case.

On the 2d Instant, I was attacked with Dysentery, but in a very slight manner and took 18 grain of Cal. in the evening of that day and slept very comfortably during the night, on the morning of the 3rd I felt better & took a dose of Castor oil which operated much in the usual way and felt pretty well during that day; but on the evening I had two or three rather offensive stools and had occasion to get up during the night. In the early part of the morning of the 4th I felt sleepy & slept very soundly until 7 o'clock, when I awoke by no means refreshed & felt symptoms totally indescribable, which made me suppose I should have an attack of a serious nature; I remained in that state for about 1½ minutes I think when I was suddenly seized with violent vomiting and purging of thin watery matter, with violent thirst (and excessive pain in the region of the stomach, and confined to it alone) I immediately took a dose of the Cholera mixture which was soon rejected, warm cloths were applied to my stomach, my feet emersed in hot water, but all seemed to deny me any relief I lost about 20 ounces of blood from the arm, I then took another dose of the medicine, but still the pain and thirst were the same; I found myself by that time getting very weak and felt very cold, I then took some hot brandy and water and another dose of the medicine, the former being rejected shortly after it was taken; the pain still continuing I began to despair, but fortunately recollected that you recommend the Nitric Acid blister as an important remedy, which having mentioned to Mr. S. it was immediately applied, when I may say from the instant that it commenced to pain me I felt relief; the pain thirst &c. abating Mr. S put it over the greater part of my bowels which pain was by no means inconsiderable, but that was soon and easily remedied by the Carbonate of Potass and then a large blister of Cantharides was put over the parts touched with it and I afterwards found small draughts of weak brandy and water a little warm a most agreeable beverage, which I continued to drink occasionally until I fell into rather a sound sleep from which I awoke greatly better and have continued to improve ever since altho' I am still weak; I deem it necessary to remark that on the morning of the 5th I was seized with a vomiting of bile owing to its return, the stomach I suppose having been deprived of the usual stimulus not a particle being vomited or passed during the attack, I take the liberty of stating my case only with the idea of shewing you how much I am indebted to you for the the perusal of Mr. Powell's observations to Dr. Meek, as I am pretty certain without it I could not have recovered and would blame myself very much if I neglected the use of it in a similar case,

Believe me
Dear Sir,
Your's most faithfully,
J. MACK.

The Gazette.

WEDNESDAY, 4th OCTOBER 1820.

A fourth ship has arrived at Madras, from England the 3rd of June; she has added but little, to the intelligence brought us by the Asia; From Calcutta we have but little novelty, if we except the comments of the Editor of the Journal, who can see nothing good or great, in any government or can let even the harmless pageant of a Coronation pass without his animadversions.

We have more then once said, that we will not be the advocates for bad government, or ill timed measures, but at the same time we deem it our duty, to oppose sentiments so hostile to any thing like order, and which tend to the subversion of that respect which the governed ought to feel for their Governors.

We refrain at present from saying any more on this subject, as we contemplate old England free from these intestine broils, enjoying the blessings of a long peace, the mistress of a free trade, and a free people.

The Bengal papers contain a Proclamation by the Viceroy of Canton, giving Foreign Vessels the liberty of importing rice, on certain terms, but, withoutguaranteeing any fixed price, or allowing them the privilege of taking in a China Cargo, free from the exorbitant port charges which are levied on all merchant ships; for allowing that a Ship might net 50 per cent. on her Cargo of Rice it would be but a sorry compensation for a trip to China, to return empty.

In another part of our paper will be found an account of the loss by lightning of the Private Ship Tanjore, Captain Dacre, from England, as also the rescue at Kedgeree of a valuable ship, (the Maitland,) from the devouring flames by the spirited exertion of her Commander and Crew.

The cause of the party to which Lord Cochrane has attached himself in South America, appears to be gaining ground, their revenues are represented in a flourishing state, and their arms every where victorious.

The following is extracted from a late American paper.

There are three objects an American statesman ought always to have before his eyes, steadily advance upon, and never abandon, viz;—

1. The acquisition of Cuba—This is necessary to the republic to maintain the union of the Western and Atlantic States, to protect the commerce of the Valley of the Mississipi, to command that of Mexico, and to furnish coffee to the republic.

2. Independence of Mexico—This would give us a free trade. A free trade would throw the commerce and gold and silver of Mexico into the bosom of the republic.

3. A trade to India by the Mississipi-river—This would turn the richest vein of our foreign commerce into a chanuel exclusively American, and place it beyond the reach of European annoyance, and enable us to derive all the advantages of our superb position between Europe and Asia.

Since writing the foregoing, we have been favored with the following extract of a letter dated Bussora 11th August.

"Bussora is in a dreadful state of confusion, and has been so for more than three weeks. The Arabs of Zabier entered the town and attacked the Serai but were not successful. They then killed many of the unfortunate individuals found in the streets and plundered a part of the bazar. Among the killed was the commandant of a regular Beloochee corps in the Turkish service.

Every body goes about armed; the Governor scarcely stirs out of his residence; and we are all ready for a start in case of future hostilities, to leave the combatants to fight out the battle by themselves.

We are in state of continued hurry, excitement, and anxiety; the bazars all shut, and all anxiously looking out for succour from Bagdad. It is most probable that the Muselim must privately leave his government, which will at once consign the town to the Arabs, who even now are loud in their threats against the supposed friends of the Turkish Government.

The Arabs have long really possessed Bussora; these events will in all probability lead to an open assumption of authority.

Captain Blake was well known in the India Country Service as Owner and Commander of various Ships; few men in that line of life have met with more chequered vicissitudes, have displayed more personal activity, more energy of mind, or were more unfortunate then he was in the ultimate result of 40 year's hard service—by those acquainted with the subject of this obituary notice the Friendly virtues of his character will be estimated as remembered. Possessed of a warm and generous disposition, none applied in vain for his advice and assistance when he was in a situation to afford them; and with a mind and "hand open to melting charity," the children of distress were ever the objects of his aid and support even under his own untoward circumstances, whilst to those who were dependent on him, and under his control, he was a kind and generous Master and Commander. In his native duties he was affectionate, kind and disinterested, and his memory will be long cherished, respected and esteemed, by those who from their intimacy were best acquainted with, and most able to appreciate the virtues of his character.

DESCRIPTION OF MHOW.

To the Editor of the Calcutta Journal,

SIR,

I was considerably surprised, on perusing your Journal of the 21st of July, to find in it a Letter dated Mhow, June 4, 1820. from a person styling himself QUI HY; with the many assertions respecting the state of our society, the localities of our Cantonments, and the miseries attending our servitude in Malwa, so foreign to the general opinion of the society of Mhow.

Believe me, Sir, there is not a Military Station in the Bengal Provinces that can boast of more unanimity, harmony, and good fellowship, than prevails in this delightful Station; and as for luxuries of the first stamp, I can venture to assert it stands foremost.

For instance, here we are in the full enjoyment of one of the most salubrious climates perhaps in all India; I am now writing this Letter, clad in my cloth coat, the thermometer ranging from 70 to 75 degrees, the nights delightfully cool, so much so as to render a blanket necessary.

This alone is a luxury, which, at this season of the year, is not generally experienced in the Bengal Provinces.

The soil of Mhow, is extremely, fertile, as to produce, in the greatest abundance, vegetable of any description, in the highest state of perfection; such as peas, french beans, lettuces and potatoes, the latter of which, by the bye, grow all the year round; these surely are comforts which ought to satiate the voracious appetite of the delicate QUI HY. I cannot give QUI HY the credit of being a literary character, for in one part of his Letter he asserts that the word "Monsoon." is not to be found "in the numerous Dictionaries of the Mhow Library." To confute this, I refer him to Johnsons Dictionary, for his better information.

QUI HY's representation of the late hurricane at Mhow, gives full scope for a few observations. Not a Bungalow scarcely was blown down, either of the old or new; and the damage sustained in general, was of a trifling nature.

The constant entertainments given by our liberal Commandant,, together with the Regimental Messes, (which, for superior living, friendship, and conviviality, few can excel). will, I trust, convince the Public that we are not that "anti-social, gloomy, and morose race of people," which the discontented QUI HY would wish to make the world believe.

We have a very excellent Parsee Merchant at Mhow, whose shop would do credit to the first Station in the Army; Claret, Madeira, Beer, and various French Wines of the first order, with, all kinds of Europe articles, are procurable in great abundance, and at moderate prices. Indeed I have never scarcely seen a Cantonment better or more conveniently suplied than this is.

In conclusion, I cannot omit to mention, that perhaps Mhow can boast of the finest roads in all India. We have a circular drive of six or seven miles, which, though at so great a distance from the Presidency, is generally crowded with vehicles of all description; the roads are water-proof against the Monsoons.

I now take leave of QUI HY, who, I conclude by the tenor of his Letter, has not participated in the festive boards of our happy and social society; which, perhaps, may in some measure, account for his having written a Letter so fraugh with spleen.

I am, Sir, Yours, &c.
VERITAS.

SEPTEMBER 14.

The Ship Woodman, Captain Kellie, from the Thames the 3d of June, anchored in the Roads yesterday. This Ship is stated to have brought no Passengers.

Lieutenant General Bowser appointed to take the command vacant by the Death of General Hare, has left the Presidency, for Bangalore.

The Death of Sir John Jackson. Bart. having occasioned a vacancy in the Direction. Mr. J.D. Alexander, and Mr. Westenra, were amongst the Candidates for the Seat. The Election is to take place on the 9th of June, and it was thought Mr. Alexander would be successful.

SEPTEMBER 19.

Accounts reached the Presidency yesterday morning of the total destruction by lightning of the Ship Tanjore, Capt. Dacre, bound from London to this Port. This awful accident occurred on the 6th instant, at 8. 30 P. M. off the harbour of Trincomalie. The explosion we understand was dreadful, and the moment the Ship was struck, she was in flames in all parts. All hands were compelled instantly to quit the burning Vessel, and before 9 P. M. the people were in the boats, some miles to the South East of Trincomalie. We are happy to say the boats succeeded in getting into that Port on the 8th----from which place some of the Passengers with the Captain and Officers arrived in the roads on Sunday night in His Majesty's Schooner Cochin. The Passengers and Crew left the Ship with nothing but their clothes on their backs, and were exposed for several hours in the boats without water or provisions. The Tanjore was quite a [illegible] Ship and it was her first voyage.

Mr. Browning and Mrs. Browning.

On the morning of the 6th September, weighed our anchor, dropped farther from the shore and brought up again, employed sending off a Native boat with passengers' baggage, together with Messrs. Oswin, Kettle Adam (a Ceylonese) also a black boy, servant to Sir Richard Ottley, about 1 p. m. weighed with a light breeze from the Eastward and fine wea her: stood along shore to the Southward. At sun set the sugar loaf hill bore about S. S. W. The Coin about S. W. & W. and the Barons Cap W. S. W. squally appearance with lightning. At about 7 shortened sail, heavy squalls and rain with vivid lightning. At about 8 30 p. m. felt the ship violently struck with lightning, and immediately she was discovered on fire in the main hold; stopped the scuppers manned the pumps sent the Carpenters to scuttle the deck and men to draw water and throw down the Hold to extinguish the flames; but finding the fire and smoak increasing at all Hatchways and every appearance of the Ship soon being in one body of fire, ordered the boats immediately to be got ready and succeeded with difficulty in hoisting out the yawl which was stowed in the long boat. Hooked on the long boat but the flames of fire from the main Hatchway had communicated to her and rendered her useless; a small four oared boat which was on the larboard quarter was lowered, endeavoured to penetrate the between decks to get oars for the yawl as also some bread and a little water, but the fire and smoak was such as to prevent us.

A binnacle compass, a tin case contaitaining the ships' papers, and a box of dollars marked———that was in the poop cabin were lowered into the boats, but not the smallest article of food or a drop of water could be procured. The quarter deck by this time was in flames and every person had now got into the boats (48 in number the greater part half naked,) with the exception of Thos. Philips and John Williams, seamen, who were killed on board the ship by the lightning. We were now obliged to leave the ship for the safety of our lives, with only three oars which were put in the small boat to tow the other.

We shaped a course for the shore but from the light variable airs and the ship at times approaching us, we were obliged to steer a variety of courses. At 10 p. m. saw the main and mizen mast go. We now stood W. S. W. at 10. 30. the foremast went. The ship was now in one body of fire pulled all night with the fire in sight and saw it till 4 a. m. on the 7th Sept. at 5 a. m. the day light broke—saw nothing of the fire, but the smoak issuing from it. At 5 30 p. m. saw the land, at about 7 a. m. discovered a native boat in shore—At about 10, boarded her, all [illegible] being much fatigued and ascertaining that Trin-

It was rumoured that the worthy Alderman had come over to meet the Queen, and this rumour was confirmed by his setting out on Wednesday morning towards Paris, at the same time with Lady Hamilton, who, it may be proper to state, received the appointment of one of her Majesty's ladies in waiting when her Majesty announced her intention to return to England.

It is at present fixed that her Majesty will take up her residence at Dessin's Hotel, which has repeatedly afforded accomodation to royalty; but she may herself determine to stop at St. Omar's or Abbeville.

The arrival of Alderman Wood in the town of Calais produced among the English inhabitants (about one thousand in number) a considerable ferment. It was once concluded that the long existing doubts as to the arrival of her Majesty were about to be solved, and the subsequent departure of the worthy Alderman, in company with Lady Hamilton, on the road towards Paris confirmed the belief that her Majesty would ultimately come among them. This belief led to a consideration as to the way in which she was to be received. Many were for evincing those sentiments of attachment in the strongest manner.

"Boulogne-Sur-Mer, May 26, 1820.

"Mr. Alderman Wood and Lady Hamilton passed through this town on their way, as is generally supposed, to meet her Majesty, on Wednesday. A report prevails that her Majesty's route will be through Boulogne to Calais—this had led to a consultation among some of the English inhabitants (of whom there are not less than three thousand), whether it may not be proper to offer to her Majesty some mark of respect as she passes."

It is reposted that an order has been inserted in the orderly book in the Castle of Dover, that in the event of the arrival of her Majesty, a salute is to be fired from the guns in the batteries.

The towns through which her Majesty will pass in her way to London from Dover are prepared to receive her with every demonstration of respect.

CHILI.

The following is an extract of a letter from Messrs. M'Neile, Price, and co. the Agents to Lloyd's at Santiago de Chili, dated February 18, addressed to the Secretary and received by the Hydra whaler, arrived at Plymouth:—

"We consider the capture of the strong fortress of Valdivia of that consequence to those engaged in the trade of Chili, that we hasten to communicate the same through you. It was attacked by Lord Cochrane on the night of the 11th current, with 240 soldiers of a Chili regiment, and the sailors and marines of the frigate O'Higgins, brig Intrepid, and schooner Montezuma. By day-light eight batteries were carried, and in the course of the ensuing morning the town, castles, and fortresses with 116 pieces of brass cannon, all the Spanish Royal depot, and 400 soldiers of the regiment of Cantabria, were taken possession of, the transport Do ves, (cut out of Talcahuana), and a small vessel, retaken. This was the only point the Spaniards had left in the state of Chili."

Some further details of the operations of Lord Cochrane, previously to the above important capture, are communicated in a letter from Valparaiso of the 22d of Feb. It appears that, after raising the blockade of Callao, he proceeded up the river of Guayaquil in pursuit of the Prueva frigate; but that vessel, having landed her guns and the greater part of her stores, was carried so high up the river that Lord Cochrane was not able to follow her. He succeeded in making himself master of the small island of Puria, which covers the entrance of the river of Guayaquil, and subsequently captured two large Spanish merchant vessels, the Aguila and the Begonia, one of 1,000, the other of 700 tons. The general state of affairs in Chili had assumed a flourishing aspect. General San Martin had arrived at the capital from Mendoza, much improved in his health, and there was every expectation that the expedition against Peru would proceed to its destination by the latter end of March. Nearly 7,000 troops could be rendered disposable for that object. The resources of the Government had been materially benefitted by the high duties on Chili produce, which had been exported in large quantities to Peru. This circumstance presents an extraordinary picture, in the supply of one state with the means of subsistence by another, which at the same time carried on with her the most deadly and exterminating warfare. The English ships in the Pacific, who had become in this traffic, by licenses from each power, the medium of communication between both, had made large profits by it. The Chili Government had made some liberal enactments calculated to encourage the intercourse of foreigners, and to promote the extension of their own trade. It had been proposed to levy the full duty of 34½ per cent. on all goods in transit, afterwards reshipped for the ports of Peru; but, on a representation of the impolicy of this measure having been made by the British merchants, the Government gave permission that all goods declared for export, when entered at the Custom-house, might be reshipped by a payment of one per cent. on the valuation. On all goods not declared for export, when entered, a duty of 7½ per cent was imposed. The squadron intended to resume the blockade of Callao was expected to sail from Valparaiso immediately, when the embargo on merchant-vessels in that port would be removed.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM VALPARAISO, DATED FEB. 22.

"I told you in my former letter of Lord Cochrane's entrance into Guayaquil, but as this letter may not have arrived, I will recapitulate the heads:—Lord Cochrane went there with the Lautaro, in search of the Prueva frigate; at night he entered the river alone, attacked and took two large merchant vessels, one of 32 guns, 900 tons burden; the other of 26 guns, 600 tons burden; such a thing before was never known. The entrance into Guayaquil river, on account of its difficult navigation, was never attempted except in broad day-light, and then with a pilot. The two prizes, have arrived here; they are laden with timber. The Lautaro arrived 6 weeks ago, having a few days before her arrival left the Admiral, whose arrival was also hourly expected. Many days elapsed, and anxiety was at its height, when a Spanish brig of war, the Potrillo, came in; she had been captured by him off Valdivia, whither she had been sent from Callao, with money and stores for the support of that strong place. Lord Cochrane had sailed there to reconnoitre; he looked in, and had just taken out his tompions for the purpose of making a dash, when the brig hove in sight, which he chased and captured. She had on board 20,000 silver dollars, and stores worth 40,000 more. He wrote to me on the 23d of January, saying the military commander on that station had agreed to co-operate with him, and that in the space of a few hours he should dispossess the enemy of their hitherto impregnable hold, and wholly free the southern provinces. He took 250 troops on board the O'Higgins, the Montezama schooner of 10 guns, and the Intrepid brig; but in leaving the harbour of Conception the frigate struck on a sand-bank, tore off the whole of her copper, and she made eight feet water. The gallant Admiral, not, however, dismayed, would not suffer himself to be delayed a single hour, he went on in this state. On approaching Valdivia, the Intrepid struck upon a rock and was lost. Notwithstanding this, Lord Cochrane entered the harbour, attacked the batteries, landed, assailed the forts himself, leading the men, and with his own hand planting the Chilian standard in the great square. The place surrendered as it was defended by 110 pieces of cannon, mostly 24 pounders: an immense quantity of ammunition has fallen into his hands—the military stores and chests of the Spanish army of the South, &c. This place is by far the strongest hold in Chili, having a narrow entrance, a spacious bay, with an island in the centre; there are 10 strong forts defended as well by nature as by art. This is, perhaps, one of the greatests feats ever performed. I have a letter from him, stating that he has one more blow to strike in Chiloe, a place which not being capable of defence, must fall; he has sailed thither in the Montezuma, with the Dolores transport, a prize he took at Valdivia, the O'Higgins being too much disabled to proceed in with safety; he will be here in a few days. These are most important matters, as the expedition preparing here by San Martin may leave the country safely in peace, as the whole of Chili will be freed from the Spaniards."

MAY 21.

Revolt of Ali Pacha.—According to information received at Venice, by a vessel from the Ionian Islands, which left Corfu on the 26th of April, it appears that Ali Pacha, of Albania, had been called to Constantinople, by the Grand Vizier, to account for his conduct; but that he had refused to obey the summons, and had raised the standard of revolt against the Porte. It was added, that both Greeks and Turks had taken the oath of allegiance to him, and that he was at Prevesa, organizing his army. It was reported at Corfu that Ali had declared himself King of Epirus, and that to attach to his interests the Greek population, which is by far the most numerous in, his states, he had caused himself to be baptized.

PARIS, MAY 15.

"We can affirm, that the disclosures made by Graviers have led to very important results; but the quality of various persons who are found to be compromised, induces a presumption, that the public will probably not attain a knowledge of all the secrets of the case. —Gazette de France.

Letters received from New York, by the ship Stephen, which has just arrived at Havre, say, that several persons who purposed to have taken their passage in the above vessel for France, (amongst others, General Grouchy), had renounced their intentions on learning the horrible event of the assassination of the Duc de Berri, fearing that they might find their country [illegible] to internal division.

"The investigation of the Cadiz massacre is represented as pursuing with great activity. General Campana was arrested at San Lucar, on the 14th ultimo, and his papers seized; he is confined in Fort St. Petri. General Valdes, was arrested on the 15th, and consigned to the Castle of Triana, M. M. Capacette and Cabarri, Chiefs of the Battalions Guies and Lealtad, with several officers of those corps, were also taken into custody on the latter day, and imprisoned in the Prison Towers of the Caraccas. The affair will be soon brought to trial.

LONDON TUESDAY, MAY 30, 1820.

The Election Law, like a veteran bruiser, seems to have borne pommelling day after day, without being much the worse for it. On Thursday it received its final dressing, on which occasion the performers were Messrs Lizot, Keratry, Gen. Tarayre, Le Marchant-Gomicourt, and Mechin. The Chamber seemed by that time thoroughly tired of its [illegible] work, and almost unanimously resolved to close the discussion. M. Laine, the reporter of the law, solicited and obtained leave to defer his summing up until Friday, so that the mail of this day may possibly bring us the result of the division on the general question. After all, it is to be observed that only forty-one speeches had been delivered, being little more than one-third of the number of deputies who had originally inscribed their names.

The official Gazette of Madrid contains the replies of the King of England and other Sovereigns to the communication from Ferdinand VII. of his having accepted the constitution of the Cortes. Hints are given of a tumult having taken place at Saragossa, in which blood was unhappily shed.

It is impossible, we should presume to look longer without the strongest apprehension of financial management, by which, during peace, are adding every year to a public debt, the interest which we are unable to pay. The end of this system is obvious, if a miracle does not interfere. We are now, in peace, adding more to the national debt annually, than we did at the beginning of the war under Mr. Pitt's administration. We are now also adding more to a national debt of 800,000,000l. than we were then adding to a debt of 240,000,000l.; & the money to pay this accumulation interest is now to be taken from an exhausted people, which at the beginning of the war was drawn from a population comparatively wealthy and at ease. In March, 1793, Mr. Pitt supplied the deficiencies of the ordinary ways and means by a loan of 4,500,000l. and the issue of 4,000,000l. of Exchequer bills. We this year fund, or add to the fixed debt, 3,000,000l. of Exchequer-bills (not, we fear, long to leave the market so far bare of that commodity), and we borrow, as may hereafter be wanted, five or seven millions, one sum being half a million, and the other 2½ millions, more than we borrowed in the year 1793; & we besides appropriate 12 millions of the sinking fund. In 1796 the third year of the war, we contracted a debt of 18,000,000l. In 1820, the fifth year of the peace, we borrow 12,000,000l. from the sinking fund, and between 5 and 7 millions from the contractors; making between 17 and 19 millions: in the one case but one million less, and in the other a million more, than in 1796. Where will this system have an end?

Again; we said that the sinking fund was, virtually abolished: this, we can assure our readers is no subject of congratulation with us, but on the contrary, one of great regret and alarm. But we leave it to common sense to judge whether the fact is not as we have stated. In the first instance, nearly four-fifths of it are seized at once by government, and the remaining fifth (we suppose about 3, 500,000l.) is applied on the one hand to the reduction of a debt, to which there is added on the other 5 or 7 000,000l. of fresh loan, and 7,000,000l. of funded Exchequer-bills! However, though the beneficial effects of the sinking fund are thus frustrated and the expenses incident to its management can be but ill spared, we confess that we do not wish the name of the sinking fund to be lost for it will still preserve in our mind the remembrance of a duty which we have undertaken, and which we are bound to discharge; and the violation of the fund itself will, we trust, continue to inspire dislike.

Yesterday, at 12 o'clock, his Majesty held a Court, and afterwards a Privy Council, at which the Earl of Egremont was introduced, and sworn in Lord-Lieutenant of the county of Sussex. The Hon. Charles Yorke was introduced to the Council, and re-sworn member of the Privy Council. A deputation from the Royal Society, consisting of Davies Gilbert, Esq., Treasurer, the Bishop of Carlisle, and Sir Everard Home, the Vice-Presidents of the Royal Society, were introduced to his Majesty, preceded by the Mace-bearer, to present their Book of Records for his Majesty's signature, as Patron of the Society, with which request the King most graciously complied, and promised his support to so learned and national an institution. G. Rose, Esq., was introduced to his Majesty upon his arrival in England from his embassy to the Court of Berlin, and received the honour of Knighthood.

His Majesty afterwards held a chapter of the Order of the Bath, at which the various Knights Grand Crosses and Knights Commanders, enumerated in Saturday's Gazette (as quoted in The Times yesterday) were invested with the appropriate insignia.

A free pardon is stated to be making out for Edwards, Adams, Monument, & Dwyer, for [illegible] committed prior to the 23d of February.
